(Bloomington, IL | May 6, 2026) – OSF HealthCare today announced a planned leadership transition at OSF HealthCare St. Joseph Medical Center in Bloomington, ensuring continued strong leadership and stability for patients and the community.

Eunmee Shim, president of OSF St. Joseph Medical Center, will step down from her role effective May 29. OSF HealthCare is grateful for her contributions to the Ministry and the Bloomington-Normal community.

To ensure continued strong leadership and seamless operations, Derrick Frazier, FACHE, will assume the role of president of OSF St. Joseph Medical Center in addition to his current position as president of OSF HealthCare Saint James–John W. Albrecht Medical Center in Pontiac, Illinois. These responsibilities are not new to him, as he previously served as interim president of OSF St. Joseph. He will report to Jennifer Junis, interim chief executive officer of the Eastern Region for OSF HealthCare.

“Derrick is a highly respected leader who brings a strong track record of operational excellence and a deep commitment to our Mission,” said Junis. “His leadership will ensure continued stability, alignment and momentum as we build on the strong foundation already in place at OSF St. Joseph.”

In this expanded role, Frazier will focus on strengthening alignment with OSF HealthCare’s systemwide strategy while continuing to advance high-quality, cost-effective care for patients in the Bloomington-Normal community. He will also support a culture of collaboration and integration that prioritizes a safe, supportive environment for both Mission Partners and those served.

OSF HealthCare remains deeply committed to the communities it serves and to ensuring patients continue to receive compassionate, high-quality care.
