

TRANSCRIPT OF MEDIA CLIPS-OSF OnCall pregnancy-postpartum mobile support unit

Cristal Gary, Plan President and CEO Meridian

Thirty-four percent of the counties in Illinois are designated as maternal health deserts which means that pregnant women sometimes have to drive 40, 50 or even 60 miles to the closest birthing hospital. And that's not just a problem for when it comes time to deliver a baby. It's a barrier to accessing critical prenatal care that's necessary to ensure healthy positive birth outcomes." (:27)

Brandi Clark, Vice President, Digital Care OSF OnCall

"It's an extension of a program that's already providing support, education and virtual care. Now, we're driving that care right to people's doorsteps to close yet another gap in the care those individuals need." (:14)

Kate Johnson, Manager, Women's Services, Digital Care OSF OnCall

"We'll meet them in their own community, schedule appointments that offer sonograms, lab draws, vaccines, blood pressure checks and more." (:09)