Eric Martin, Chief of Vascular Surgery at OSF HealthCare Saint Francis Medical Center in Peoria

"The reality is that OSF has a very robust infrastructure. We have tremendous inpatient wound care nurses that help with all of the patients that I take care of. We have a very robust outpatient wound care center that helps with my patients as well. And it is a collaborative, team effort that has made those programs so successful." (:20)

Dr. Martin's compassion drove him to continue pushing for the unique approach to regenerative restoration that saved lives and limbs.

"He shared cases to actually show us when limbs would have been lost in the past. And with his regenerative reconstruction and really using and leveraging that novel approach where he was able to save so many limbs and his compassion around that – the emotion he brought that forward with, knowing that the course of some of those patients would have been very different had he not attempted and leveraged this novel approach."
